

The Magic Pencil

Once upon a time in a magical kingdom in the big city of Wintenity, a beautiful princess named Ashella was bathing in pure gold. Not to get clean but rather for a fundraising event. She was the richest and most beautiful princess within thousands of miles. She had just received a towel from the most handsome prince in all the land. Though she knew that if she married this prince he would just admire her beauty for days then take off with all her money just days after the wedding. She tried to avoid eye contact, though she just couldn't avoid her true love. The prince's name was Bob the 2nd. His father was King Bob. She was distracted by the prince's beauty but then a faint voice sounded like a baby chipmunk trying to give a speech! She looked all around. Then she realized her imagination was probably just playing a trick on her so she kept walking. Then she heard it again. She turned around and tripped. She then heard the words, "sorry about that." It was a pencil! She dusted herself off and picked up the mysterious magical pencil. "Hello," it said. "Um, h h hi" she said. Sorry to make you uncomfortable, but would you please take me to the school of magic just a few minutes away? Um, sure I guess. Great, then let's go, said pencil. So they headed off and only about thirty seconds later Ashella noticed that the pencil had a scratch on his side. How did you get that nasty scratch? Ashella asked. I've been with many kids back when I just floated around an elementary school nearby. I was lost at recess one day. Ashella kept on walking and finally she got to the palace where she saw the prince and the pencil said she should go over to him but she didn't really want to, but then he came over to her and he said he would like her to join him at the ball that night and of course she just had to say yes. She put the pencil in its case where it belonged and went off with the prince and as she walked away she whispered, "Thank you" to the magical pencil for making it come true.

The end...for now

